The ceremony was performed at St. Bartholomew's church, and afterward there was a magnificent reception at the residence of the bride's father, on Fifth avenue. The trousseau was extremely rich, and the wedding presents very handsome. Nearly all the élite of New York society were present.

That everlasting case of Cado we said the control of the surface of the sur ker rises to the surface again. It is now said that Judge-Advocate-General Swaim has finished his review of the court-martial testimony and findings, and will render a report to the Secretary of War next week. Before a final determination can be had the Secretary will have to submit the report to the President, and it is stated that its na-ture will not be made public until the President is ready to announce his decision. It is much to be hoped that the determination of this case, which now seems to be impending, will be final. It is a scandalous case from whatever point of view it may be regarded, and no particular credits have been wan be any who have marked. have been won by any who have partici-puted in it one way or the other.

MISS HAZELTINE MARRIED. - Miss Nellie MISS HAZELTINE, MARRIED.—Miss Nellie Hazeltine, who is known nearly all over the United States as the belle of St. Louis, was united in marriage Monday, at the residence of her aunt, Mrs. Ellen Bryan, in Philadelphia, to Mr. Frederick J. Paramour, also a resident of St. Louis, who is the fortunate possessor of several millions of money. It is but a couple of summers since gossip had it that Miss Hazeltine was to be wedded to Hon. Samuel J. Tilden, and since that time other events have tended to make her name famous, particularly her alleged fürtation last summer with Mr. John Amweg, a member of Mr. Charles E. Ford's Opera Company. The bride was attired in a maga member of Mr. Charles E. Ford's Opera Company. The bride was attired in a magnificent white-velvet dress, the entire front of which, from corsage to the skirt, was elaborately embroidered in pearls. A long train of the same material fell in graceful folds behind. The corsage was V-shaped touching the correct of the short of the same material fell in graceful folds behind. Diamonds flashed in her coiffure, and a necklace of precious gems encircled her throat.

Observation shows that the fine particles of dust derived from cotton, flax, and hemp, are very different in their effect upon the health of the operatives who handle them from those of wool and silk; the cotton flue produces some irritation, bronchially, but the worst injury results from the dust of hemp during the process of dressing. The quantity of dust lost in hemp-dressing The quantity of dust lost in hemp-dressing is stated to be some four pounds to every 112; this dust produces a most severe irritation, which, however, is purely bronchial, attended with painful expectoration and strangling cough. Russian and Polish hemp both produce these effects. Neapolitan hemp does the same, and something more; that is, there is distributed in this a peculiar odorous substance—the dust of some vegetable or grass—the inhalation of which causes shortness of breath, constrictions. which causes shortness of breath, constriction of the throat, and spasmodic cough in recurring paroxysms, which continue for hours after the inhalation ceases.
